

Champagne Time For Videoswitch

Videoswitch, the market leading UK manufacturer of digital video recorders, has just celebrated its 20 year anniversary.

When the company was established in 1984, it initially manufactured digital sonar, medical electronics and data communication products but quickly moved in to the design and production of CCTV equipment.

“We have successfully built our business by supplying the CCTV industry with multiplexers, real time quads, video switchers and telemetry”, said Roland Simmons, Managing Director of Video Switch. “The digital recording “revolution” however has given us a tremendous boost. With the loyal support of an ever increasing customer base, we have quickly become a market leader, with demand for our DVR’s growing at a dramatic rate each year.”

There are countless companies that manufacture DVRs but Videoswitch stand out from the crowd with their range of non-PC based machines. The company has built a reputation for being innovative and for responding to customer demand. They were the first, for example, to build into their DVRs, two removable hard drives to allow for upgrades and servicing without having to remove a unit from site. They were also the first manufacturer to include, as standard, a built-in CD writer in all their DVRs.
